The inspiration for "Drops Of Thought" came to Antonino during a rainy afternoon in his hometown. As he sat by the window, watching raindrops trickle down the glass, he couldn't help but marvel at the seemingly chaotic yet harmonious patterns they formed.

Antonino was struck by the realization that thoughts and emotions in our minds are like drops of water cascading through our consciousness. They come and go, creating ripples and waves, leaving their imprints on our souls. "Drops Of Thought" became the embodiment of this concept, a visual representation of the intangible world inside our heads.

The Creative Process

Antonino's creative process is a delicate dance between his thoughts, emotions, and the canvas. Each artwork starts with a blank canvas and a myriad of colors on the palette. With a seemingly chaotic approach, Antonino applies random strokes, creating an abstract base layer.

As the canvas comes to life, he enters a state of flow, guided by his intuition and emotions. Antonino uses a mix of brushes, sponges, and even his bare hands to add layers upon layers of colors, each stroke representing a thought or feeling. The paints blend and merge, forming intricate patterns, and revealing the hidden depths of Antonino's mind.

The final stages of the process involve a careful consideration of composition and balance. Antonino takes his time to refine the artwork, adjusting colors, shapes, and textures until he feels a sense of completeness. Through his art, Antonino invites viewers to immerse themselves in the ever-changing world of their own thoughts and emotions.
