“Lee’s poems are not quaint exercises in poetic form. They grab you by the throat with their personal intensity, jostle your brain with their intellectual bravery, and startle your heart with their spirit and insight.”

- Jack Grapes, editor, ONTHEBUS

“Every good narrative lyric means more than what it says, and these poems convert experience into meaning even as they introduce us to new experiences. Deeply felt, fresh, and wise, in these poems Lee teaches us new stories.”

– Catherine Daly, author of DaDaDa

“A tender exploration, embracing both the heavy and the light. Done with such patience and care, one cannot help but listen.”

- Ruth Forman, author of We Are the Young Magicians
