This is the story of a man who put his life and soul in his only arrow to save his people from slavery. He threw the arrow from the top of Alborz Mountains and his body was never found. So he became a legend, people say that he became one with the mountain and he helps the people lost in the misty roads of Sierra Alborz. Siavash Kasrai adapted this story from an ancient legend of Persia and a note on Arash in Avesta (Zaratustra's holy book), and wrote this poem. With illustrations from the award-winning artist Farshid Shafei and Arash Hejazi's translation, now the story is available to the English language readers.
