Views from the Valley is a poetry collection about the flow of life. About the way it can be bad and good at the same time even if it doesn't always make sense. That it's possible to be wildly happy in the face of extreme pain and heartbreak. That it's possible to feel grateful for what you have even when it feels everything is slipping away from you. It's about hurt, happiness and crawling out of dark places and the things we all use to numb the pain. It's about all the different ways we can look at life when we are stuck in the valley or just in between peaks, on the way up or down. It is a beautiful, poetic examination of the human experience.
